

One Day

Written by Philip C. Vinson
Monday, 30 June 2008 15:36 -

One day the storms of life will all be past.

We are now home with Christ at last. He has just been waiting for that day, When He comes to catch us away.

One day our past we will remember no more. Heaven has been waiting with an open door.

When the gates of pearl you pass through, God is there waiting just for you.

One day there will be no more toils or pain; Sickness and death will not be part of our lives again.

No longer will there be the disappointments you had here, No more heartache, not another tear.

One day those that have gone through so much, Jesus will give you the final healing touch.

All the suffering and anguish you went through, No more will there be; a new body He has given you.

One day our sorrows and grief will be gone.

We have reached Heaven, the place we waited for so long.

And we will leave this world without a "goodbye".

We wouldn't have time, anyway, for a reply.

One day all your troubles and trials will cease; You have now entered the City of Peace.

You think you have gone through more than anyone else ...

All these things have now passed-enjoy yourself!

One day we will reach that city with streets of gold, Never again to walk streets slippery, freezing and cold.

But in that city where God has everything right, Where it is eternal day, with no night.